

Z-Xtreme™ 5000T Label Solution

Extremely durable labelling without the expense of laminates

Are your labels exposed to harsh chemicals such as acetone, xylene, or 1,1,1 trichloroethylene? Are they subject to harsh abrasion or other environmental extremes?

For abrasion and chemical resistance currently unseen in other thermal transfer label solutions, consider Zebra's new Z-Xtreme 5000T thermal transfer labels combined with the high-durability Image Lock™ resin ribbon. In the past, you'd need to use a costly and time-consuming overlamine to get this performance. Available in white or silver, Z-Xtreme 5000T also has a high-tack acrylic adhesive that will stay put on difficult-to-label surfaces, making it an appropriate choice for your toughest and harshest applications.

If you need a label that is designed to adhere to difficult surfaces, while being resistant to most common industrial solvents/chemicals, damage from scratching, moisture, sterilization, cold storage temperature cycling, and other harsh conditions without the need for an overlamine, consider Z-Xtreme 5000T.

Key features

- Extreme Chemical Resistance
- Abrasion Resistance
- Heat Resistance (up to 300° F/149° C)
- Environmental Resistance (up to three years sunlight exposure)

Ideal for:

- Laboratories
- Pharmaceutical
- Healthcare
- Research Facilities
- Automotive

Proof that Z-Xtreme 5000T Stands up to Your Demands

Here is an example of the impact of harsh chemicals on Zebra's Z-Xtreme 4000T when compared to the Z-Xtreme 5000T with Image Lock ribbon. For additional chemical testing results, ask your Zebra representative to show you our technical data sheet.
